Dr. Leon H. Collins, Jr., Addresses The Bucks County Medical Society

DEATH RATE IS HIGH More Die from Pneumonia Than Ever Did From Typhoid

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 10.—The Bucks County Medical Society met Wednesday in the Fountain House and heard a lecture given by Dr. Leon H. Collins, Jr., associate in medicine at the University of Pennsylvania. About 30 physicians attended the meeting.

Dr. Collins declared that pneumonia, still next to cancer and diseases of the heart and blood vessel, is the most important cause of death in America.

"More than 100,000 people die of pneumonia in one year in the United States, and 9,000 died in Pennsylvania alone in 1936."

Dr. Collins, Jr., who is secretary of the Commission for Study of Pneumonia Control for the Medical Society of the State of Penna., spoke at a meeting of the Bucks County Medical Society sponsored by the Department of Health.

More pneumonia patients die from Type No. 1 pneumonia than ever did from typhoid when it was at its height, the physician asserted. Geographically, he explained, pneumonia is most prevalent in a belt along the Atlantic seaboard and in another belt in the Southwestern area.

Of the 9,000 pneumonia deaths reported in Penna. in 1936—there must have been some unreported, he said—58 were lobar.

Describing modern aspects of the treatment of pneumonia, Dr. Collins, Jr., who is regarded as an authority because of vast research and hospital training, said the greatest advances have been made by physicians in diagnosing and treating the cases.

He referred particularly to the scientific value of the Neufeld method of typing the disease, stressing the ad-

Testimonial Dinner Is Tendered Mrs. Ancker

Mrs. Henry E. Ancker, 431 Radcliffe street, was the guest of honor at a luncheon yesterday afternoon in the Travel Club Home. The affair was a testimonial to Mrs. Ancker, who for 14 years served as president of Bristol Branch of the Needlework Guild of America, and at the annual Fall meeting tendered her resignation.

Mrs. Fred Kring accompanied Mrs. Ancker to the club home presumably to attend a meeting. As Mrs. Ancker entered she was surprised to find directors assembled.

The room was decorated with artificial Christmas trees in white with red ornaments. Each window sill was covered with green pine branches with a large red candle in the center.

The guest of honor, with her officers and honorary president, Mrs. C. L. Anderson, were seated at a table on the platform. A blue vase of yellow chrysanthemums was the centerpiece surrounded by silver candlesticks with blue and yellow candles. The directors were seated at small tables, and blue vases with yellow chrysanthemums, representing the Guild colors, were used as table decorations. Covers were laid for 47 directors; and two guests, Mrs. Thomas Hawkes, past president, and Mrs. Walter Stillwell, president of Edgely Guild.

Mrs. James Lefferts asked the blessing. Mrs. Harry Pope was toastmistress. Mrs. Stillwell, Mrs. Lefferts, Miss Katharine Keating and Mrs. Fred Kring, gave short talks. Mrs. Kring, in behalf of the directors, presented Mrs. Ancker with a gift of money arranged in the form of an old-fashioned bouquet. Mrs. Ancker spoke of her appreciation in the support she had received from the directors, and expressed hope they will give the same support to the new president, Mrs. Earl McKuen sang "Perfect Day," accompanied by Miss Katharine Keating.

A business meeting was held with Mrs. Ancker presiding. The nominating committee was composed of: Mrs. Frank Lehman, chairman, Mrs. Ernest Lawrence and Miss Frances Landreth. Mrs. Lehman presented the following names for the officers, election occurring at this meeting: vice-president, Mrs. Paul Forster; first vice-president, Mrs. Kring; second vice-president, Mrs. Lefferts; third vice-president, Miss Keating; fourth vice-president, Mrs. A. Morris; secretary, Mrs. Pope; assistant secretary, Mrs. L. J. Bevan; treasurer, Mrs. Griffith L. Williams. Mrs. Forster accepted the honor, and spoke of the work of her predecessor. Mrs. Ancker then congratulated the nominating committee on their choice. The committee in charge of arrangements included: Mrs. Frank Lehman, chairman; Mrs. Pope, Mrs. Edwin Hey, Mrs. Bevan, Mrs. Clyde Nash.

Mrs. Forster was presented with a bouquet of chrysanthemums.

President's Party Held By Members of Sorosis

The party was marked by readings given by Mrs. Russell Tull, Trevoise; by a social period, and serving of refreshments.

The Sorosis presented to the library a cloth curtain for the stage.

EDWARD'S DECISION LAST YEAR STUNNED WORLD

Message To Parliament Told World of King's Abdication To Wed

GAVE FORMAL MESSAGE

By Charles A. Smith
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

LONDON, Dec. 10.—(INS)—King Edward VIII of England, ruler of 400 million subjects scattered over a quarter of the earth's surface, stripped himself of all his kingly power for love of a woman a year ago today.

Two weeks of fevered anxiety ended for king and nation shortly before four o'clock on the afternoon of that day, when Edward, in a formal message to Parliament, announced his "final and irrevocable decision" to abdicate his throne and marry the American-born Mrs. Wallis Simpson.

The news, though expected, stunned the entire world.

The thoughts of millions in every country were centered on the House of Commons in London when Premier Stanley Baldwin, in formal morning dress, rose at the end of question time and moved to the Bar of the House.

Bowing to the Speaker, he said in a low voice: "A message from the king."

Gravely and slowly, the Speaker began to read the royal message. The first dozen words revealed the monarch had decided for love:

"After long and anxious consideration, I have determined to renounce the throne. . . . I am now communicating this, my final and irrevocable decision. . . ."

The two fatal words, "King Abdicates," went speeding to the uttermost corners of the earth by cable, radio and telephone.

Premier Baldwin, in his lengthy apology to the Commons, explaining all the details of his majesty's decision, told the world the royal step had not been influenced by Mrs. Simpson.

Detailing his final talk with the king, the premier said: "I had to tell him that I did not think that particular marriage (to Mrs. Simpson), would receive the approbation of the country. The king said to me, 'I am going to marry Mrs. Simpson, and I am prepared to go. The decision is mine alone. . . .'"

As night fell, crowds jammed the broad Mall, leading to the royal palace. Thousands lined the sidewalks opposite the Piccadilly home of the Duke of York, soon to be proclaimed King George VI.

Slogan and counter-slogan was shouted from mouth to mouth. "We want King Edward." "Down with Baldwin." "Whose king is he? Ours!" "Long Live King George." "Down with the American woman."

Police reserves had to be called out to quiet the throngs, but long after midnight crowds continued to mass outside the palace, chanting "we want Edward," singing "For he's a jolly good fellow."

Outside 147 Piccadilly, within little more than a stone's throw from the palace, the mobs sang "God save the king," yelled for "Our king and queen, urged them to come out and show themselves."

And inside Fort Belvedere, his famous country hideout just outside London, Edward sat in his study, tearing up papers, writing letters of farewell to personal friends in England, bidding "good bye" to old servants, instructing them to take care of his favorite dogs.

For he had already decided to quit the country, to journey across the Channel and be near the woman for love of whom he had abdicated his throne.

PLANS FOR NEW HOSPITAL IN DOYLESTOWN ARE APPROVED BY MEMBERS OF VILLAGE IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION; CAPACITY TO BE TWENTY-ONE BEDS

Committee to Procure Bids and Estimates; To Be About $45,000

NEWS IN THE COUNTY

Addition is Being Built to Lutheran Church in Chalfont

DOYLESTOWN, Dec. 10.—Doylestown Village Improvement Association, at a session this week, approved plans for a new Doylestown Emergency Hospital, the bed capacity of which will be 21.

The new hospital is to be located at Spruce street and Belmont avenue.

With a hospital building committee, headed by Mrs. J. Purdy Weiss, president; Mrs. George W. Kerr, Mrs. William C. Newell and Mrs. Charles H. Shive, and a men's advisory board, composed of George Hart, H. Letroy Kister and J. Purdy Weiss, it was decided to procure bids and estimates so that the V. I. A. can more easily ascertain the cost of the proposed new hospital, which according to the architect's estimate may cost $45,000.

More than a year ago the movement toward a proposed new hospital got underway when members of the hospital committee of the V. I. A. learned that "to remodel the present Emergency Hospital would prove too expensive for what they would get."

Fred Martin, of A. Oscar Martin & Son, County Seat architects, who submitted a drawing of the new proposed hospital, stated that the building would be 141 feet long, 64 feet deep in its greatest dimension, and will be one story with a gable roof.

The main entrance, which will be treated with a Colonial portico with four columns and a pediment roof, will face on Belmont avenue. Dormer windows in the roof area will provide light and air in the half story.

There will be four private rooms, one semi-private, and a ward in the maternity section, and three private rooms and two wards in the medical end of the building.

The first floor will also contain an office and waiting room off the vestibule.

The structure will be built of stone, brick and frame with a slate roof and will be definitely Colonial in character.

Provisions will be made so that it can be enlarged with little difficulty if required, Mr. Martin explained.

The building will be raised high enough to provide as much light in the ground floor area as possible.

The interior of the first floor will be laid out in two sections either side of the main entrance, one of which will be the medical and the other a maternity section. There will be a central corridor and on either side will be private rooms and wards. It will have a capacity of 21 beds.

At the extreme end of the corridors will be the working areas. In the medical end, Mr. Martin said, will be located an operating room, sterilizing room, X-ray room and separate room for accident patients. All this will be

The total number of communicable diseases was 97.

Dr. Strouse calls attention to the fact that tuberculosis is a reportable disease. He urges physicians to help the State fight the disease by reporting every case they are called to attend, thereby aiding to fight the spread of the disease.

Great Ovation is Given "Mummy and The Mumps"

Bristol high school's play for 1937, "The Mummy and the Mumps" was presented before the public for the first time last night, and judging by the rounds of laughs and applause it was a most successful production.

Every member of the cast contributes to the success of the play. John Warren gives one of the best performances ever seen at the school. Taking the part of a wise cracking, lazy bell boy he certainly acts to perfection.

"Bill" Lynch and Katherine Quinn also give good performances. The play as a whole is one on which the audience dislikes to see the curtain come down. The comical climax is where Lynch and Dave Hetherington both impersonate Mrs. Laidlaw.

The second and last performance will be given tonight at 8:15 in the high school auditorium.

SUGGESTS HOUSE GIFTS AS BEING APPROPRIATE

Believe Such Will Solve Many Gift Problems For The Christmas Shoppers

BENEFIT ENTIRE FAMILY

By Xmas Gift Seeker

When shopping for relatives and friends, why not resolve to purchase a Christmas gift for the house? This is a good suggestion indeed, for that will mean that the entire family will be benefited.

One of the places at which to purchase this gift for the home is at the Mill street store of the Philadelphia Electric Company. For there all manner of gas and electric equipment may be seen—items that will clip hours of drudgery from house-work, and articles that will make the entire house more comfortable and livable. Why not decide today to place an order for a new electric or gas stove, or if the budget does not permit such a large purchase, secure a smaller item, such as a lamp, toaster, waffle iron, or other item of electric equipment which this company suggests and has on display?

The hearts of many little girls are delighted as they peep into the window of Dries' Furniture Store, Mill and Pond streets, these days. For there in fine array are doll coaches in all sizes and styles. One tot in gazing at this group of little doll "buggies" a few days ago, stated she was going to ask Santa to bring her one of those nice gray metal and leather coaches, trimmed in red. And who could wonder at such a choice, for this particular coach shown at Dries' is nicely upholstered in leather, and has dandy leather tires, also a movable leather canopy-top.

"Johnny" may have been pleading for weeks for "hi-tops," and now is the time to buy them, for they can be given to him as a Christmas gift. And Hardy's Shoe Shop, Mill street, has them in stock, nice and high, in black leather with trim of brown; with two buckles at the very top. For the little tot in the home there may be had at this same store, red leather house slippers, ankle height, with a snap on either side of the ankle.

Pal-Mar Cut Rate Store, Mill street, is helping to solve some problems for the young miss and the madam, by suggesting manure sets. There are leather zipper cases, and there are wooden cases, and for those of more moderate means the ensembles come in smaller sets in card-board boxes. The nail polish, in various shades, the oily tint remover, cuticle remover, files, orange sticks, buffers, etc., are contained in many of the gift packages. What could be more practical in the gift line?

Tells of Girl's Murder

Paris, Dec. 10.—With steady concern, the wild-eyed Eugene Weidmann sketched his story bound with horror today and told in detail how he had killed pretty Jean De Koven, 22-year-old Brooklyn dancer, one of five victims of the most bloodthirsty "Bluebeard" ring Paris has ever known.

The Ickes-Roper Clash

IT MIGHT be worth while if the Administration spokesmen, who so vehemently insist that in order to avert disaster the opponents of Mr. Roosevelt should cease criticizing and co-operate, would investigate and inform the public which one of the most recently orating Cabinet members really represents his views—Secretary of Commerce Daniel Roper or Secretary of the Interior Harold Ickes.

THE SITUATION created by these

Cabinet speakers is puzzling. When a member of a President's Cabinet makes a prepared address, copies of which are sent to the press in advance, containing expressions of opinion on controversial issues, the natural assumption is that the speech was submitted to the President, read and approved by him. That is the well recognized rule. If it is not rigidly adhered to the Cabinet member at least would make certain that the views he proposed to express did not clash with those of his chief and would not embarrass him if publicly proclaimed. When the President and a member of his Cabinet find themselves not in accord on an important issue, the only answer is the resignation of the latter.

AS, apparently, neither Mr. Roper nor Mr. Ickes has the least intention

OTHER POST WORK

MORRISVILLE, Dec. 10.—A committee of members of Willet C. Sanford Post, 433 American Legion, has been named to care for distribution of Christmas baskets this year to the needy of the section.

The committee members are: Chairman, Harry Penham; John Sumner, M. R. Reiter, Glen Thompson, David Factor, Markus Ketchum, this group to work in co-operation with the Red Cross.

On each Wednesday evening the Legion conducts classes for the Sons of Legion, in charge of Silvester Freeman. The boys will be taught how to make miniature airplanes and later will receive instruction in making larger planes. There are 15 boys enrolled.

The new Legion paper, the Legion Laidson, made its first appearance at the meeting. It is published monthly. Walter Wardel is editor, assisted by John Sumner, William H. Howell and Mrs. Wardel.

An interesting report of the Americanization committee was given by Reiter. He said the program this year calls for the presentation of medals to boys of the eighth grades of Morrisville, Falls Township and Lower Makefield Township. He also said an essay contest will be held and the county winner will receive a senatorial scholarship to some college. The program also calls for the sending of a deserving boy to the boys' State camp.

Rotary and Exchange Clubs Eat Lobster Tails

Bristol Rotarians and Exchanges were out in full force last evening when a joint meeting was held in the Elks' Home here. The Exchange Club was the host club. Dr. Allan Moore, Doylestown physician, was the guest speaker of the evening. Music was furnished by the Rohm & Haas orchestra and was greatly enjoyed by members of the local service clubs.

Preceding the featured talk of the meeting members indulged in a delightfully different meal consisting of lobster tails. These tails were shipped to this country from South Africa and were a new dish for many of the members. Some of them were as much as eight inches in length.

Dr. Moore took as his subject the experiences of a North Cape cruise which he made last June. The trip included visits to the countries of the Scandinavian Peninsula; Sweden, Norway, Finland and Denmark, and also Russia.

The speaker commented on many of the practices he found in these different countries. He spoke of the flowers that are found in Sweden and of habits of the peoples who live here.

He told the audience that he was very much disappointed in Russia and said, "the best way to cure anyone with communistic tendencies, in my opinion, is to visit Russia." Dr. Moore also told the group that medicine in Russia is at least thirty years behind that of this country.

KIPLING MEMORIAL

Lovers of the poems and stories of Rudyard Kipling in every nation have been invited to participate in a memorial to the author who has created the most vivid portrayal of the panoply of the British Empire, and who lived for a time in Vermont, where he wrote several of his best known books.

The Rudyard Kipling Memorial Fund is not only an imperial but an international tribute, according to the statement by the Earl of Athlone, president of the fund which was launched at a banquet in London. The chief speaker was Winston Churchill, a message from the king termed 'Kipling's genius the common heritage of all who speak the English tongue.' The original Stalky (Ma), Gen. L. C. Dunster-ville) was present, beside the original McTurk (G. C. Beresford), and their talk was of the early days with Beetle, Kipling's name for himself in his great book of schoolboy days Stalky & Co.

The subscription fund is aimed at amassing 250,000 pounds, $1,250,000, to perpetuate Kipling's name in educational enterprises. These will include a Kipling foundation to create 50 bursaries, or scholarships, at Imperial Services college at Windsor, the present name of Kipling's old school, for boys who are sons of servants of the Empire; a memorial library of Kiplingiana, and a suitable memorial at Westward Ho! where Stalky and McTurk adventured.

FINE HEALTH RECORDS

Scientists who labor feverishly and unselfishly in their laboratories, for love of their work and without hope of reward, do not always go unpaid. Sometimes they glean during their lifetime a modicum of the world's goods, but more often they remain satisfied with the knowledge of work well done, and of their priceless, and unpriced, contribution to the welfare of mankind.

Men and women who offer their lives as microbe hunters or as human guinea pigs, are made happy by such an announcement as that which comes from an insurance company's survey and which goes to prove that the sacrifices of the altruists are not in vain.

On the basis of mortality statistics for the first ten months of this year, 1937 promises to be the best year ever experienced in this country. The cumulative death rate lowest ever recorded, is 8.3 for each 1,000 during the period, for all causes. The figures have been compiled from records of the 17,500,000 industrial policy holders of the company.

It is significant that new low mortality rates have been registered for those diseases against which are directed the strongest efforts of scientists, health authorities, public and private groups, educators and the press. Among them are tuberculosis, syphilis, locomotor ataxia, general paralysis of the insane, typhoid fever, scarlet fever, diphtheria, chronic nephritis, and diseases incidental to pregnancy and childbirth.

Those women who court good luck by momentarily reclining in Wallis Warfield's old bathtub would seem to be imaginatively all washed up.

Running a World's Fair and the city of New York would be a strain on the Grover Whalen wardrobe if it meant gardenias in both lapel

In the maternity section will be located the delivery room, sterilizing room, laboratory and nursery. Both working areas, Mr. Martin explained, will be heavily insulated to prevent annoyance to the ward and private room patients.

The ground floor will contain a kitchen, laundry, laboratory nurses' dining room, boiler rooms and quarters for the health center.

There will be an isolation ward in the half-story second floor of the building so that a patient and nurse can be entirely isolated in case of communicable diseases.

Washington Snapshots

By JAMES PRESTON

Congress in no uncertain terms is standing up on its hindlegs and demanding the right to legislate as it feels best. The reason? The business recession and the desire to avoid sitting by idle while the country is forced into another tailspin like that which followed 1929.

One factual result already evident is that the five-point program set up for the special session has been knocked a-wind. Bets now are that only one of these will be enacted and two new ones probably substituted.

The original program included farm, wage-hour, government reorganization, "little TVA" and anti-trust bills. Of all these, leaders now believe that only farm legislation has any chance of passage and even that might be put over until January.

The new planks in the program are legislation to stimulate housing and to eliminate or modify the tax on undistributed corporation income. Both of these are being put forward because Congress knows the general public wants legislation which will stimulate confidence rather than breed fear.

That is the reason, too, why wage-hour, "little TVA," anti-trust and government reorganization bills won't be pushed; they stimulate fear, not confidence.

This Washington talk about budget balancing is serious, as evidenced by the President's letter to Senator Barkley calling attention to the fact that $250,000,000 or thereabouts must be raised to finance the new farm plan and that extra taxes must be levied where more expenditures are legislated.

The budget can't be balanced and the farm plan financed too without one of two things and probably both: (1) restoration of confidence so that business will pick up and tax collections stop their downward skid, and (2) the levying of some new taxes.

The budget balancing demands and depression fears are so strong now that more and more Congressmen are selling themselves upon the idea that a manufacturers sales tax must be resorted to. It all comes out of the same pocket, they realize, but too many business taxes defeat their own end by drying up the reservoirs.

Somebody needs to amend not only the Federal Housing Act but also the feeling that exists between Secretary Ickes of the Interior Department and Nathan Straus, chief of the new housing set-up.

Ickes battled Congress and finally got the new housing organization put under his control. Then Straus, whom Ickes didn't like very much, was made head of the new agency.

The feeling between the two cropped out at a recent conference at which Ickes admitted that three years ago he authorized wire-tapping to check up on his aides. Straus served notice that if his wires were tapped there would be plenty of fireworks.

Behind the Scenes in HOLLYWOOD

By HARRISON CARROLL

Copyright, 1937
King Features Syndicate, Inc.
HOLLYWOOD—Lights! Camera! Action! For "The Adventures of Robin Hood", Olivia de Havilland and Errol Flynn are playing a love scene in her boudoir, which probably is the most feminine-looking boudoir in the history of Hollywood.

The fireplace in Maid Marian's sitting room is a yawning cavern. The walls of the room are of stone and there are stone flags underfoot. In an adjoining chamber can be seen the heroine's bed, a huge four-poster with a white fur spread that looks like a polar bear skin.

Miss de Havilland and Flynn are standing by a window, locked in embrace.

The color cameras will faithfully reproduce the blue of her gown, also the green of Flynn's tights.

In his role as Robin Hood, Flynn is wearing a wispy of a blond mustache and just the hint of a Vandyke beard.

This is a dramatic scene, a stolen rendezvous for the lovers. Maid Marian is urging Robin Hood to flee before he is discovered. He is trying to get her to run away with him to Sherwood Forest.

The two stars are not getting enough fire into the scene to suit Director William Keighley.

Every director has a different way of inspiring players. Michael Curtiz shouts. Ernst Lubitsch gets in and plays the scene himself. The quiet-voiced Keighley often does it with a jest.

"Look, Olivia," he says, "you must show more concern for his safety. If he were caught in your bedroom, what would the columnist say in the Nottingham Gazette?"

Keighley's difficulty is small indeed compared to what confronts Ernst Lubitsch on another morning at Paramount. Lubitsch is directing Claudette Colbert and Gary Cooper in "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife". Today, he is trying to get Cooper to sit at the piano and sing: "Lookie, lookie, here comes cookie!"

Now singing is not one of Gary's accomplishments and he looks thoroughly sheepish.

They have a girl in from the music department to show him how to move his hands on the piano keys. The music will be dubbed in later, but if his fingers don't make the approximate motions, many a sharp-eyed fan will write in to Paramount.

They rehearse the scene once and Claudette Colbert has all she can do to keep from laughing.

"Look, Gary," says Lubitsch, "it's very simple. Here is how to do it." So he sits down at the piano and sings "Lookie, lookie, here comes cookie". The number probably never has been delivered so badly before, or in such an accent. But he puts plenty of swing into it.

Cooper makes another weak effort.

"I'll never get this right," he says helplessly.

"What's the matter?" demands Lubitsch. "You sang a cowboy scene in another picture."

"Yeah," replied Cooper in an injured tone, "but I didn't have to remember to do anything with my hands."

At Twentieth Century-Fox, they are remaking an early silent picture hit, "Sally, Irene and Mary". This was the film that started Constance Bennett on the road to fame and won admirers for Joan Crawford and Sally O'Neil.

But there was no scene in the script like the one we watch Director William Seiter shoot this week.

In the silent version the three heroines were chorus girls.

Now you discover them as manicurists working in a modernistic barber shop.

Alice Faye is Sally, Joan Davis is Irene and little Marjorie Weaver is Mary.

We try to find out from them who played what part in the silent version. None can tell. Even Director Seiter fails in the test.

But they needn't feel so badly about it. Nobody at M. G. M. can tell us when we call there and it takes two hours to finally run the information down at the Twentieth Century-Fox script department.

The Sally of the silent version was Constance Bennett, Irene was Joan Crawford and Mary was Sally O'Neil.

"GIVE HER WINGS" by MARIE BLIZARD

CHAPTER XV

It was the first time in her short life that Julie could remember not throwing all her efforts into getting ready for a party.

Even Dick perked up over the party. He was pleased as a child over his new dinner jacket, took Julie to the tailor with him on Saturday afternoon to have her approve the fit of the shoulders. She said, meaning it, that he looked very handsome in it. Julie had a pretty, appealing way of paying compliments. Dick hugged her hard, put her shoulder as though he were glad for something that she couldn't understand. How could she know that he was glad he was making her happy? He had only that satisfaction to sustain his hope that he had done the right thing.

Then something happened that changed all Julie's plans. Rita Cartright told Julie that there was to be a great "to-do" at our place on the Fourth. Dad's flying club—seven planes in all—are coming from all over for lunch. It's going to be a barbecue.

Julie wanted to be at that party. Rita had told her that Clarence Berman, the transatlantic flier was going to be there, Frank Hilsley the aviation editor of a New York newspaper. Oh, Julie wanted an invitation to that party. She began hesitating to look forward to her solo flight. That would bring her nearer to their level of interests. The things she'd have to talk about—

The third was only a few days off. Julie and Rita were friends. Julie had twice been invited to lunch and swim at the Cartright's after that first day. Rita had talked vaguely about people she wanted Julie to meet but Julie had never met them.

"Tommy Hayden and Katherine—that's his wife and she has a pilot's license—flew over from Boston yesterday," Rita would say in her off-hand manner. "You'd like them."

Or... "I almost telephoned you last night. Jerry Kincaid drove up with Jean and Hattie and we went to a roadhouse. Jerry wanted me to call you but we didn't finish dinner until late."

Almost wasn't good enough. And Jerry Kincaid liked her, did he? Julie had looked up Jerry Kincaid—Capt. Kincaid—in the Aviation Year Book. He was, it appeared, somewhat of a celebrity. He had flown his plane in all the national air races, had made and won endurance flights. Julie pigeon-holed the information with Rita's remark that he liked her. Hadn't Pete Waddell told her to think like a man and be herself? She was doing both to the best of her ability.

Julie had a blind faith in destiny. Flying was going to mean something to her. She didn't like it and she never would but somehow destiny was going to find a means for her. Meanwhile, she was going to help herself.

She got out her pencil and paper and did some rapid calculation. She was going to give a party. The facilities of the Allerdice household did not compare with those at the Cartright's but there was no reason why that should deter her. She had nothing to be ashamed of. The Allerdice silver was worn thin but it was good silver and there was enough of it. There was a fine Italian lace cloth her mother had brought back from her honeymoon in Florence. The wide, polished cherry-wood table would seat eight,

Rita... Dick... Millicent... Althea... Charlie Clark... Pete Waddell... Julie. The names appeared in neat little rows. Sighing, she added: Tommy's Dad was spending the holidays with Aunt Sarah Allerdice.

She'd get out flowers from the florist, deep red roses, white candles for the tall candelabra.

Her pencil moved over the pad rapidly. She wrote: cocktails, two; beef mignon, clear soup. She crossed out soup. Cousy couldn't manage it. She wrote: fried chicken, candied sweet potatoes, fresh lima beans. Those were Cousy's best dishes. She'd have a salad and ice-cream. No, ice-cream was too old-fashioned. They'd have... she couldn't think of anything but ice-cream. She wrote: coffee.

She'd have place cards like Millicent had for her engagement party. Her thoughts strayed back to that party. It seemed so long ago! She wondered what she'd do about Dick. She hadn't told Rita or any of the gang at school that she was engaged. She hadn't worn her engagement ring. Well—she'd think of that when the time came. Her orange organdie? No, she'd worn that to the first dance. She'd make a jacket out of white pique and wear it over her black taffeta slip.

She'd have loved a new frock but when she'd bought the flowers and candles, the mixings for the cocktails, the chickens and "extras" there wouldn't be much left in her emergency fund. And she'd have to do something nice for Cousy who would bear the greater burden of her party.

Cousy was delighted. So was Priscilla whose joy was short-lived. Priscilla was relegated to having supper that night with the detestable Susie Twining.

The way was clear and easy. There was only one thing to consider: suppose Rita couldn't come? She had to. Julie wasn't giving the party because she had any social urge—she expected her invitation to her dinner party and the country club dance to be reciprocated—with an invitation to spend the day of the Fourth at Rita Cartright's.

Having disposed of the details of her own party, Julie gave her attention to what she'd wear at the Cartright's, what she'd say. She meant to bone on her lessons between that day and the Fourth. Rita's guests would find that a girl could have brains as well as beauty. She wouldn't talk too much; she'd ask intelligent questions. She wouldn't wear her beige which was her "best" dress—she'd be very simply dressed as you'd expect a girl to be dressed who was above thinking of clothes. She'd wear her green linen. It did things to her figure with its short flared skirt, clinging hips.

Waddell looked at the schedule on his table-desk. "Allerdice, you're set for a solo on Friday?"

Allerdice said she was. Not very heartily.

"Julie, aren't you excited?" Rita demanded when class was over.

"You bet," Julie agreed.

"I can't wait! Dad's promised me that when I've had five hours solo, he's going to let me fly his beloved Lockheed. That's my idea of a celebration! You know I've been flying since I was ten but Dad made me take lessons from someone else before he'd let me touch his plane."

Julie smiled weakly. "Maybe it's because I wasn't brought up in a plane that I'm a little bit scared."

President's policies and that he agrees with their speeches. But that can hardly be because they do not agree with each other. Clearly, it would seem that if the President approves the fervid utterances of his Secretary of Commerce, he cannot approve the fierce pronouncements of his Secretary of the Interior. And vice versa. Mr. Roper's speech, for example, was soft, persuasive and reassuring to business generally. He urged that the budget be balanced, expenses curtailed, the national debt reduced, the undistributed-profits tax reversed, the railroads treated constructively and responsibility placed upon labor organizations as well as business management.

IN OTHER WORDS, he made a very strong, conservative speech. It might have been Mr. Winthrop Aldrich talking, or Mr. Lewis Douglas. It sounded like the late Ogden Mills, and it was interpreted as "very reassuring," indeed. However, no one could possibly apply the word reassuring to Mr. Ickes' violent oration before the American Civil Liberties Union Wednesday night. It could be called stimulating, or provocative, or disturbing, or a good many other things; but not reassuring. He directly attacked the Supreme Court, intimated that it was controlled by corporate influences and against "human rights." Then he spent considerable time denouncing "big business." Finally, he swung into a general condemnation of that part of the press which does not support the New Deal, accusing it of suppressing and coloring the news and misrepresenting the facts.

OBVIOUSLY, the Roper and Ickes speeches clash. They are made from different viewpoints, inspired by a different spirit, and dictated by a different desire. One wants to revive business and have it and the Administration pull together for the common good. The other wants to fight business, the courts and the press. The question is, Which one really represents the Roosevelt view? With almost anyone else it would be impossible to reconcile his retention of two men with such completely conflicting views in his official family. The reason it is not impossible to reconcile this with Mr. Roosevelt is that he, personally, has at different times expressed the views enunciated by Mr. Roper and at other times the views enunciated by Mr. Ickes.

EXTRAORDINARY as it may seem, he agrees with both—or at least has in the past. That explains how two members of his Cabinet can sing safely on wholly different keys, but it does not help the business men whom Mr. Kennedy urged to stop bellyaching, to decide which direction they will be taken if they stop opposing and begin co-operating. Nor does it promote belief in either the sincerity or the stability of the President. The reassurances from the soft-spoken Mr. Roper are completely nullified by the vehement attack of the always bitter Mr. Ickes. It is a typical New Deal performance.

Tells Physicians of The Deadliness of Pneumonia

vantage of getting sputum so that the pneumococci germs can be typed.

There are 32 specific types of pneumonias, with types one, three, two, eight, five, seven, four and fourteen the most common.

"I wish that we physicians could make every one in Pennsylvania as pneumonia conscious as they are appendicitis conscious because the latter disease accounts for about 20,000 deaths a year compared to the high mortality of pneumonia," said Dr. Collins, Jr.

"Early diagnosis," emphatically stated Dr. Collins, Jr., "is the crux of the whole matter. People must learn to be willing to spend as much to combat pneumonia as they would to recover from an appendicitis operation."

Dr. Collins, Jr., explained the value of an equine serum, which takes about two years or slightly more to perfect, and a rabbit serum, which can be obtained in a little more than a period of eight weeks, in treating pneumonia.

The equine serum is used in combating types one and two, and five, seven, eight and fourteen which were recently added. The rabbit serum is used in cases suffering from type three infection.

Dr. Collins, Jr., described pneumonia as an emergency disease and said it should be treated as such by general physicians and hospital authorities.

The State is willing to help fight pneumonia and is willing to help in the typing service and training technicians for various phases in combating the disease.

Dr. Collins, Jr., who illustrated various types of infections and gave case histories by means of slides, concluded by reiterating the importance of accurate and rapid typing, the administration of serum and the use of oxygen in saving the lives of pneumonia sufferers.

Dr. Jesse E. Packer, of Newtown, the president, presided, and presented a guest, Dr. Hyer, of Norristown, a member of the Montgomery County Medical Society.

THOMAS CAREFREE AS HE AWAITS THE AXE

By Lawton Carver
(I. N. S. Sports Writer)

NEW YORK, Dec. 10.—(INS)—Hammering Harry Thomas, the pride of Long Prairie, Minn., Trinity College and the Los Angeles railroad yards, shapes up as one of the most robust, carefree and confident gentles ever to find himself close to that moment when he will look his executioner in the eye.

His appointment is for Monday night and the man expected to bring about his pugilistic demise is, of course, Max Schmeling.

But somehow a distinct note of wariness persists in what you hear about heavyweight fights these days; for they can't forget around here that ever so often of late expected victims have refused to hold still, with noteworthy results. Schmeling knocked out Joe Louis, Bob Pastor went ten rounds with Louis and Nathan Mann belted Pastor every way but straight up. And Thomas insists that he is fixing to add one more upset to the list.

However, looking at the thing logically this Schmeling bout couldn't possibly turn out wrong, and the German positively will score a knockout before the end of the scheduled 15 rounds or bring out a rash of contusions and abrasions about Thomas' head and body in knitting a decision for himself.

That's what the script calls for, anyway, this being one of several times up booked for Schmeling by way of readying him for the title fight with Louis next summer. Thomas, least known here of several candidates eager to take the match, was handicapped and if the thing works out right all Schmeling has to do is keep pitching and not forget to duck.

In that case, this piece is in the nature of Thomas' pugilistic obituary. If, instead, he should decline, emphatically to stick to the routine, and winds up parting Schmeling's whiskers with that left hook, here is the new sensation's backgrounds leading from Long Prairie to Madison Square Garden by circuitous route.

After finishing high school in his native Minnesota, he blossomed out into an all-around athlete at Trinity College of Morningside, Iowa, playing end on the football team, captaining the baseball team and competing with the wrestling team.

Armed with his diploma, he headed for Los Angeles and in due time found himself chasing around the railroad yards at the throttle of a switch engine. He next was a catcher for the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League, and was accounted a good one. His name was—and still is—Henry Pontius, later changed to the present Harry Thomas when he entered the ring.

The famous Dan Thomas, his uncle, persuaded him to try his hand at fighting and Jim Jeffries was among his first tutors. In his initial effort, on November 15, 1932, he belted out a kent named Frank Jones in two minutes flat, and since that time has been pestered the second and third raters as fast as they have shown up.

He has scored 44 knockouts in 56 starts, has lost only three bouts and has never been off his feet, if his and everybody else's memory is all right. I nearly forgot to mention that he is a hunter of some ability and a good catch-as-catch-can cook. But can he fight—when he is in here with a top-notch opponent?

Blame Secret Police

Moscow, Dec. 10.—Americans and other foreigners were thrown into a panic today as the belief spread that secret police are responsible for the disappearance of Donald R. Robinson, New York writer, and his wife.

The story of Mrs. Robinson, who said her husband was taken from the National Hotel suffering from pneumonia, and placed in an "iron lung" only the day before she, too, vanished, caused consternation in the alien colony.

The "iron lung," many feared was nothing less than Lubyanka prison, whose gray walls have been the background for innumeral executions.

Debt Defaulters Begin Parade

Washington, Dec. 10.—The semi-anual parade of Europe's debt defaulters began passing before the Treasury window again today—with no indication that they intend paying so much as a dollar of their $12,000,000 debt.

It was the same old story, oft repeated since the Hoover Moratorium of 1932. "Sorry, but we haven't the money."

Winter Grips Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., Dec. 10.—Winter was here today, moving in with a 52-mile-an-hour wind, snow that drifted to 7 feet in depth and below zero temperatures that took nine lives.

Unofficial low temperature of 12 below was reported at North Cheimund, near Elmira, and there were official returns of 2 above in the Catskills and Adirondacks.

RESCUED SPARROW IS PET

ST. LOUIS, (INS)—Last summer, 13-year-old Lorraine Decker saved a sparrow from a cat. Now, the sparrow is Lorraine's pet.

Every morning, Lorraine goes to the rear door of her home and releases from a cage—"Fritzy" as she has named the bird. The sparrow flies away, but promptly at 11.30 a. m., returns for dinner. Then the bird flies away again returning at 4.30 p. m., to be fed and placed in the cage for the night.

Suggests House Gifts As Being Appropriate

Moffo's Shoe Shop, Mill street, suggests hand-bags for mil-lady and the little lady. In addition to a large assortment in materials, styles and colors for the adults, Moffo's has some neat plaid and paisley styles for the little girl. The plaids come in combinations of green, red, blue, black; also bright red and black; and many others. These pouch-style bags will hold many little items which the child would otherwise lose. And the moderate prices are the most surprising item of all.

Christmas Gifts for Milady Should Have Lure

Christmas gifts for milady should be romantic and alluring as well as practical. Whether the lady in question be housekeeper or office worker, no matter her age, she welcomes some holiday token which is charming and intimate. For an intimate gift there is nothing more appropriate than a lovely negligee or nightdress. Jane Walsh is wearing one of pale pink organdie with puffed sleeves which is worn over a square-necked nightgown of pale pink satin. Loretta Young is shown by Loretta Young. It is fashioned on Empire lines and is of rose-beige lace and satin with its high waistline marked by a wide, draped satin band held in place by a jeweled ring. For a more casual gift, accessories always offer a solution. Ann Sothern models a chic black ensemble which includes suede handbag in a new triangular shape and black suede gloves.

URGES OBSERVANCE OF UNIVERSAL BIBLE SUNDAY

President Roosevelt Issues A Statement Endorsing
The Plan

CHURCHES PLAN AFFAIR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Dec. 10—President Franklin D. Roosevelt endorses the observance of Universal Bible Sunday on Sunday, December 12.

The Protestant churches of the nation will also unite Sunday in the observance of Universal Bible Sunday. They will remind the people of the nation of the unrivaled place which this great book has had in the making of our nation and the nations of the world. This year for the first time the celebration is to include a nationwide broadcast over the Columbia network at 1:30 P. M. in which the Secretary of State, the Honorable Cordell Hull, and John T. Manson, president of the American Bible Society, will speak. The celebration, as formerly, is sponsored by the American Bible Society by whose uninterrupted missionary activities, now in their 122nd year, approximately 285,000,000 volumes of Scriptures have been distributed in more than 40 countries and in 226 languages.

In urging the observance of Universal Bible Sunday President Roosevelt says: "Every one bears increasing witness to the vitality of the message from on high received in the Syrian Hills in the dawn of man's first hope."

With what reverence do we look to this ancient land of Syria, destined from the beginning to be the stage of great events. To this country—small in area, ill favored by nature, always near the dominance of drought and death—there came in the fullness of time the flower of the Christian Revelation, the Revelation which was to transform the world. Thus out of Syria came a chronicle without a parallel in history or literature, the Book of Books, the Bible, written under Divine inspiration to vindicate the ways of God to man.

"It is always a pleasure to commend the observance of Universal Bible Sunday and I am glad to know that the American Bible Society, unwearied by long service in the dissemination of the Sacred Scriptures to far lands and remote peoples, is planning to observe Universal Bible Sunday, December 12th next. I wish for the observance the full measure of success which its high purpose merits."

FILM STARS HAVE LOST THEIR FEAR OF THE CANDID CAMERA

But Hollywood Limits Action Shots To Accredited Photographers With Amateurs Banned

HOLLYWOOD, Dec. 10.—(INS)—Hollywood has won its battle against the terrifying candid camera by taking the enemy into camp.

Once the glamour girl was seen in still pictures in one, two, or three depending on her versatility—studios. She was never doing anything much. She didn't have to. The fact that she was there, was sufficient.

This terrifying sameness of expression and pose wasn't so apparent back in the days when actresses were prone to show their legs with a certain fetching artistry. But when they began covering up the shapely shafts, and the editors had used their supply of what they term "leg art" from the back files, they were stymied. Then, like the voice that came to the movies in 1937 and saved the day, the candid camera came to the newspaper.

The candid camera caused a furore in Hollywood. Actresses who formerly swept royally into restaurants under the glare of lights, now either stayed at home or sneaked in through a side door and scurried into a booth. In the beginning, the stars made the errors of smashing cameras, trying to buy the boys off, using influence with the publishers and editors to have the "offenders" fired or assigned to China.

They urged their studios to bring pressure to bear to keep certain of the lens specialists off the picture lots, where their bread and butter lurked. And by hook and by crook, they almost had things under control—or thought they had—when came the deluge.

The amateurs have been accused of chiseling in on practically every worth-while profession extant, more than often to the disadvantage of the professionals engaged in it. But when the amateur minne-cam addict, thousands strong, strapped on his little black box, and went forth to lie in wait for the screen star, he played right into the professional's lap. The stars gave in. They ran to the professionals.

"If it must be," they cried. "Let it be by experts."

With the result that the smart Hollywood cafe owner, and likewise the proprietor of any public place, scans transient patrons for the candid cameras at the doorway if he wants to keep his lucrative screen star trade. A person not an accredited Hollywood photographer has as much chance getting into any of the half dozen smart Hollywood restaurants today with a candid camera as he has of getting it to Japan. Candid cameras, long banned from the studio sets, now have carte blanche, but only in the hands of experts. Amateurs check theirs at the studio gates.

Now a top-flight actress will have a forkful of food half way in her mouth when she hears a small click, half as loud as an electric switch, and she'll go on without a pause. The camera has probably caught her with her mouth open, her eyes half closed in a droopy look, and a look of hair down in her face. A year ago she would have swooned on the spot, but today she's flattered. For she's now called upon her resources and devised new appeals which endear her to the hearts of "her public" other than pose one, two or three.

The top bracket screen star is now an all around gal. If she's not she does her best to give that impression, and in the process of so doing gradually acquires quite a bit of what she's trying to put across. She has had to beat the candid camera at its own game, and if possible go it one better. As a result the screen today is offering the surprising and delightful spectacle of our leading feminine players going to town. As one observer expressed it, they're not only being natural, but super-natural.

800 CAGE TEAMS IN INDIANA CIRCUIT

By Phillips Peck
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Dec. 10 — (INS)—An army of 800 high school basketball teams again is on the march in Indiana, battling over the winter sports trail before the plaudits of an estimated 500,000 fans.

Such a concentration of hardwood forces seen commonplace to the average American sports fan but to the Hoosier it is always new. In no other state has the offspring of venerable Dr. James Naismith taken such a firm hold.

The trail is long; it sometimes is repetitious and always is difficult. But to the half-million spectators who witness the activities during a season of Hoosier basketball it never grows dull.

The teams bear the same names; the same coaches are back of many schools and the schedules present the same old rivalries in their 1937-38 version. What is more important, the same interest, thrills and excitement are in every city and town in the state.

Until the 800 quintets complete their 20-game schedules and the four-week state championship tournament next March the undercurrent of excitement will be flowing strong through the minds and conversations of the Hoosier sporting public and on the state's sport pages.

Indiana High School Athletic Association officials estimate that 300,000 persons witness the four-week state tournament as it progresses through sectional, regional, semi-final and final stages.

A sell-out crowd of 15,000 always is assured for the four final games at Butler University fieldhouse here, leased annually by the association as the site of its colorful, thrill-packed finals.

The 1937-38 presentation is a far cry from the humble beginning 34 years ago when 15 schools were listed as charter members of the Indiana High School Athletic Association. Although supervising all high school sports, the association has come to be thought of almost solely for its basketball extravaganza.

Only a few more than 100 schools play football in the state but IHSA's entire membership participates in the hardwood program. Why? Commissioner Arthur L. Trester simply states:

"Anyone can play basketball, that's why they do. Just like automobiles, anybody can drive a car, that's why they do. Any of our schools with a dozen boys or even less can have a basketball team; it takes a large school to equip and maintain a football squad."

FOOTBALL PLAYERS TO MEET

All players of the St. Ann's A. A. football team are requested to be present at an important meeting in the club-house, Sunday afternoon at 2:30 p. m.

CLIPPER SMITH CLOSE TO ROCKNE STANDARD

By Davis J. Walsh
(I. N. S. Staff Correspondent)

NEW YORK, Dec. 10—(INS)—What do you think of a football coach who has his punters standing at midfield for an hour each day and kicking for the "coffin corner" in practice, instead of waiting to do their practicing in the game? Who keeps sending three men into the pit in tackling practices, one to hit the dummy and the other two to recover the resultant fumble? Who leaves so little to chance that once, when suddenly matched with another team for a post-season game, he drove his automobile for two nights and a day in order to scout the new opponent?

That's funny. That's what I think too.

I think it sounds like the late K. K. Rockne all over again and, in case you don't agree, you can get yourself a few spare hours of debate in the City of Philadelphia and, notably, around the campus of Villanova College. By this time, both are quite convinced that when they hired Maurice J. "Clipper" Smith they got themselves a football coach who not only has the winning tradition but comes very near to the Rockne ideal.

Just for the purpose of the record, this was the first "Clipper" Smith to come out of Notre Dame. The second is doing all right at Duquesne, too, but Clipper No. 1 has more or less stolen the show among the Notre Dame Smiths. I'm not so sure, in fact, that he hasn't stolen the show from just about everybody this year.

He's the only coach I know of who has not just one undefeated football team for 1937, but at least part of another. There's no attempt to belittle Buck Shaw at Santa Clara in saying that more than a few of the unbeaten Broncos are legacies from Clipper's regime. Nor am I back-handing Harry Stuhldreher—perhaps rather the contrary—with the statement that Smith took over five or six of Harry's players this year in moulding the currently undefeated Villanova—and the reason is pretty much the same that applied in the case of the Old Master of South Bend, namely: (a) Ingenuity and imagination; (b) unremitting attention to detail.

It was the latter, as much as anything else, that made Rockne great. He never scrimmaged his team after the first week in October. Why? Because mostly he wanted to give each man each day his individual attention, drilling him over and over again in his assignments. You can see the same thing almost any day at Villanova, with added touches like Stopper, Earle, Mellus, Stovick and Verbitsky, five first class punters, working on the coffin-corner kick, sometimes for hours on end.

When the game comes, the play is no longer a gamble. It's a precise strategem. The tackle-and-recover-fumble idea is generally in line with the Old Man's way of figuring, too. The Old Man having been a great hand at concentrating on the quick score by the simplest route possible. In this connection Chick Meehan, Manhattan coach, said ruefully after Villanova had beaten him this fall:

"Why they even scored two touchdowns while we had the ball."

He meant that Villanova recovered one fumble in mid-air and, on a second play, Wysocki and Mellus teamed perfectly to block a punt and score.

The outstanding merit of Smith's methods, however, really made itself plain in the last two games of the season in which Villanova took a couple of really fine defensive teams, Temple and Loyola, and ran up scores of 33 to 9 and 25 to 0 respectively, the latter after a trans-continental jaunt from the chill of Philadelphia to the heat of Los Angeles. Rockne always was quite a man for getting his teams rolling in their final climax games.

He also was quite a man for knowing what he was about when confronted by sudden crises. Last year, when Villanova was matched with Auburn for a post-season game in Havana, Smith was attending a Thanksgiving Day game in New York. Upon receipt of the news he drove his automobile throughout that night, the following day and most of the next night in order to see Auburn play its final game.

Rockne was a collier of quaint but expressive and vivid phrases. Here are some of Smith's:

"Put a little more bulge in that muscle" (when he wants extra power); "hit that guy with resilient hips and hang him" (when he wants a player to put a real block on an opponent); "he likes leather" (referring to anybody who revels in bodily contact); "they have primitive action" (meaning that his line is charging hard and making quick openings).

The Sage of South Bend will never be duplicated, of course. But the record seems to indicate that Mr. Clipper Smith is not without possibilities. Anyhow, he's doing pretty good right now as an assistant sage.
